

Action Fosters Faith

“Faith without works is dead.”

I take this to mean: you will lose faith if you don't act on it. Hope for the future will die without action.

As I alluded to above, taking action tells your brain that it's possible to attain the future you want. It not only creates confidence in your own abilities, it shines a light of hope into the dark unknown.

Steps taken toward your vision of the future help to further program your brain to see, feel, and believe that your vision is coming. It will prompt creativity and an acute awareness of opportunities.
